Publisher's note

The cover is often one of the last steps we take when laying out the issue each month. Then comes the inevitable task of developing an appropriately catchy headline for the cover photo and story. For the March cover, the term Horse Sense immediately came to mind. My grandfather would often use this term, and if he said someone had horse sense, it was indeed a great compliment. According to Merriam-Webster, synonyms for horse sense are common sense, gumption, levelheadedness, sensibleness, wisdom, and wit. In the context of this month's cover story, it makes perfect sense.

In 1992, The Kennedy Law Firm began its Student Intern Program. This free program gives students from every background the chance to experience something that not only educates them but can help open doors for them for the rest of their lives. The program took a two-year hiatus due to COVID, but Kevin Kennedy is proud to announce that it's officially back! To learn more, check out Tony Centonze's article starting on page 14.

Another Clarksville tradition was also "born" in 1992, The Blackhorse Pub & Brewery in Historic Downtown Clarksville. On March 2021, we all were aghast to see our favorite restaurant on fire. Now, after a year of rebuilding, they are also restaffing and gearing up to open their doors in the very near future. (And I know for certain that my family will be at the front of the line for our pizza and beer cheese fix!) Read more about the Blackhorse's literal rise from the ashes in Paige Eisemann's article and interview with Blackhorse owners Jeff and Sherril Robinson on page 12.

With spring right around the corner comes the opportunity to take advantage of our community's many parks, the greenway, the blueway, as ways to soak in the sun and burn a few calories. Don't forget to check our calendar starting on page 22 for all the many events and activities going on in March.

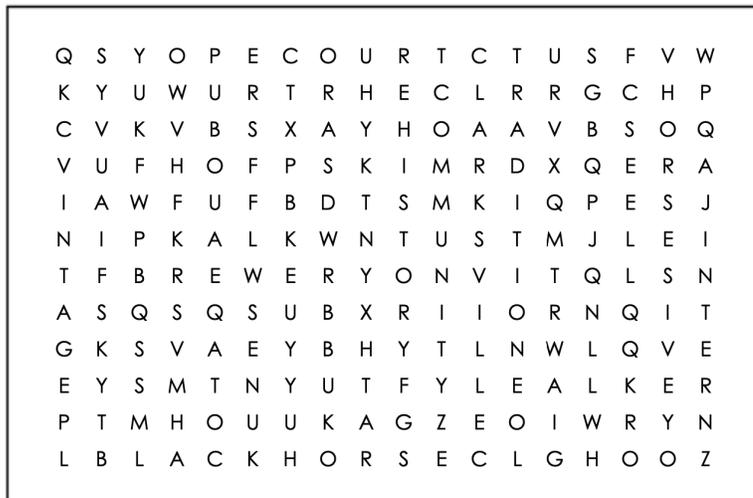

We hope you have a great month and as always, thank you for picking us up!

45 OR OLDER?

Time to talk about a COLON CANCER SCREENING

Brought to you by Tennova Medical Group

Many people often shudder when their doctor informs them it's time for a screening colonoscopy. But regular screening, beginning at age 45 for people with average risk factors, is the key to preventing colorectal cancer, according to the American Cancer Society (ACS).

Excluding skin cancers, colorectal cancer is the third most common cancer diagnosed in both men and women in the United States, per the ACS. The good news is that if colon cancer is detected before it spreads, the five-year survival rate is about 91 percent, according to the ACS. If it's not caught before the cancer spreads to other organs, the survival rate dips to about 14 percent.

"There are often no signs or symptoms of colorectal cancer – that's why it's so important to get screened," says Craig Ennis, MD, Gastroenterologist with Tennova Medical Group. "A colonoscopy takes about 20 minutes and during this time, physicians can identify, remove and test anything abnormal, such as a polyp, which is how most colorectal cancers begin." People over age 45 have the highest risk of colorectal cancer. You may also be at higher risk if you are African American, smoke or have a family history of colorectal cancer."

"Your doctor can advise you about the right time to begin, as well as testing frequency, but industry guidelines suggest that a repeat screening should be conducted every 10 years for adults with average risk. People at higher risk of developing colorectal cancer may need to be tested earlier than age 45 and more frequently, as determined by your physician," says Dr. Ennis.

EVERYONE CAN TAKE THESE HEALTHY STEPS TO HELP PREVENT COLORECTAL CANCER:

- Get screened starting at age 45 – earlier if you have above average risk factors.
- Encourage your family members and friends over age 45 to get screened.
- Quit smoking and stay away from secondhand smoke.
- Get plenty of physical activity and eat healthy.

Depending on your age, a colonoscopy screening may be a covered wellness test under your insurance plan, and most plans cover a colonoscopy completely as a follow-up test or diagnostic tool. Check with your insurance provider and your doctor's office for help scheduling a screening exam. If you need a doctor, call (931) 502- 3810 or schedule online at TennovaColonoscopy.com.

Craig Ennis, board-certified gastroenterologist, joined the staff of Tennova Medical Group in 2016. He received his medical degree from the University of California, San Diego. Dr. Ennis also completed his residency and fellowship at the University of California, San Diego. Prior to joining Tennova, Dr. Ennis was in a private practice group for twenty-one years in Orange County, where he was voted a Top Doctor for gastroenterology in the county five times. He served as chief of medicine at St. Joseph's Hospital (400 beds) and was a member of the leadership corps for 15 years. Dr. Ennis is experienced in treating hepatitis, inflammatory bowel disease, celiac disease as well as common digestive diseases. He participated in over 400 clinical trials in Orange County. Joined by his wife and two sons, he has chosen to settle and eventually retire in Middle Tennessee where he plans to continue enjoying hiking, fishing and music. 🦋

THE PENN WARREN

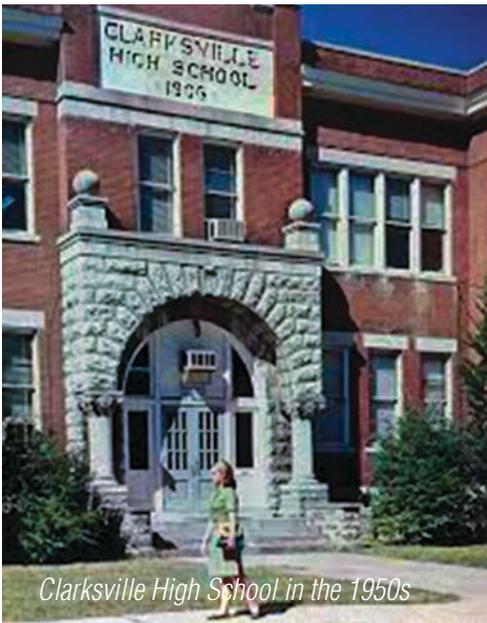

By Paige Eisemann

For many Clarksvillians, 300 Greenwood Avenue will always hold a special place in their hearts. The corner of Madison Street and Greenwood Avenue was the location of decades of hopes, dreams, learning and living for generations. Formerly Clarksville High School, the building where many locals were educated is now a unique and luxurious apartment property that combines the history and beauty of the building with the amenities of today.

Police Department until it was damaged by the tornado on January 22, 1999 and after restoration destroyed by fire on December 24, 1999. How grand it must have felt for students to attend school in the beautiful new building on Greenwood Avenue, as it had been designed to include the latest amenities

Built in 1906, Clarksville High School was a testament to the commitment of the citizens of Montgomery County to education. Providing ample academic classroom space with the latest in physical education space and resources, the school set the standard within our community and surrounding areas. The school building itself was built to enhance or replace the Howell School located at 501 Franklin Street. The Howell School building had opened in 1879 and housed ten grades. Records note that expansive playgrounds and indoor toilet facilities had been improved when water closets had been added to the basement area in 1900. When the beautiful new Clarksville High School building opened in 1906, Howell school shifted to only serve seven grade levels. Later, the original Howell School building housed CMCSS district offices and eventually the Clarksville and provide ample natural light in classrooms. How lucky that the newer building did not meet the same fate as its predecessor! Studying the Montgomery County archives leads to dozens upon dozens of photos from special events at CHS. There are many photos of the unique architecture of the building standing proudly behind students in period dress from the early 1900s through band uniforms in the 1960s. There are also records detailing the important day 1963 when five young men from Burt High School became the first integrated students at Clarksville High. The first integrated class graduated in May 1965, with those five young men among them. This is just a small glimpse of the past this building holds, echoes of the history of not only our entire community but also of the hundreds of families whose children walked those halls.

Clarksville High School was moved to its new location in 1968. Now the building holds those memories and opens the doors for new ones. Purchased in 1982 by partners and alumni Jerry Clark and John Roe, the building was redeveloped into Greenwood Place Apartments. Now the former CHS building has been acquired by two real estate entrepreneurs who invested in extensive updates and modernization. The building is now called The Penn Warren, taking its name from its most notable graduate, poet laureate Robert Penn Warren.

Featuring 65 loft style apartments, The Penn Warren is the only apartment building of its kind in Clarksville. There are several options available, from one bedroom flats to three bedroom townhome style floor plans. All feature the special architecture of the historical building which has been preserved as much as possible, as well as washer and dryer hookups.

Many offer high ceilings, upgraded kitchens, and even fireplaces. The apartments offer upscale amenities such as a fitness center, community room with billiards, swimming pool, tennis court, outdoor grill areas, gated dog park, art gallery, and storage units all within the secured building. The apartments have proven popular due to their close location to downtown restaurants and shops, as well as walkability to APSU. Modern luxury is encased in a beautiful testament to the past.

The memories of high school that many Clarksvillians hold dear may revolve around their time spent within the walls of the building at 300 Greenwood Avenue. Each time they drive by they might remember their favorite class, a special evening at a school dance, or hours spent practicing with the band or team. We are fortunate that people in our community have chosen to dedicate their time and resources over the years to preserve this building and now it can be home to new memories for the residents of The Penn Warren for years to come. 🦋

On March 3, 2021 a pillar of dark smoke rose into the sky over downtown Clarksville. That smoke was the result of a fire at the beloved downtown institution, the Blackhorse Pub and Brewery. The blaze was so strong that eventually the fire department had to cut holes in the roof and spray water directly into the building below.

Water filled the space, extinguishing the fire but being described as flowing down the stairs like white water rapids. Since that day, the Blackhorse Pub & Brewery family has been on a course of rebuilding and repair so that they can once again open their doors to the community.

Thirty years have passed since Blackhorse Pub & Brewery was opened as one of the earliest Southeastern craft breweries of the 1990s. Owners Jeff and Sherri Robinson have devoted themselves to a lifetime of making Blackhorse special. Although Jeff had recently served in the 101st Airborne Division, they named their brewpub in honor of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment. They opened their doors on March 17, 1992. With this special anniversary in mind, the past year has been focused on restoration of the downtown institution. People have frequently driven down Franklin Street to check out the damage, see the latest progress on construction, or just to remember special times they've had at 132 Franklin Street while the Blackhorse has been temporarily closed for the past year.

The historic building that is home to the Blackhorse Pub & Brewery is getting some upgrades during this time of rebuilding. New HVAC, electrical and plumbing have been installed, as well as a new wood paneled ceiling directly beneath the roofline of the taproom. New tables, chairs and furniture will all be delivered soon, and new kitchen equipment is being installed which will increase efficiency and streamline service. Along with all these new items, the Robinsons are taking care to maintain parts of the old. Their respect for the history of not only their business but the downtown building itself is reflected in their choices. The exterior of the brewery portion of the building is being restored to reflect its facade from the 1920s. The fan favorite vintage bar in the dining room downstairs will return as well as the upstairs pool room. Along with these special touches, customer favorites will be returning to the menus as well. Many Clarksvillians have been waiting a year for beer cheese and brews!

Aside from rebuilding 132 Franklin, now the Robinsons are hard at work rebuilding their staff. Management staff and many bartenders will be returning, and new staff will be joining them. Hiring events have taken place over the last few weeks. The Robinsons have a goal of hiring approximately 115 people by their opening day so that they are prepared to serve the community once again. As February drew to a close, the installation, decorating and preparing phases at Blackhorse kicked into high gear. Buzz around the community began to build about the return of a friend and family favorite. There will be no return quite so highly anticipated as that of the Blackhorse Pub & Brewery. Robinson says, "It has been a really long year since the fire. The outpouring of support from the community for our staff was truly amazing. We are closer every day now to getting open again. Sherri and I can't wait to see the Pub full of people again. We want to thank everyone involved in the rebuilding process. Jerry Akins Construction gets special thanks for getting the job over the finish line."

Our community is happy to help celebrate the Robinsons and their staff as they triumphantly return to downtown Clarksville! 🦋

Since 1992, Kevin Kennedy and his law firm have held an internship for Clarksville-Montgomery County students. Covid-19 has sidetracked that program for the last two years, but Kennedy and his team are happy to announce that the much-anticipated week-long learning event will return this May.

“Every year, we bring high school and college students, law students and even some who have graduated and are now waiting to take the bar exam, to this class,” Kennedy said. “Every year it gets bigger. I think we’re currently up to about fifty students. We interview each one of these outstanding young people, the top-notch students from all the high schools and private schools in the area, and make our selections.”

The internship allows for students considering a career in law, or other fields, to meet and hear firsthand from judges, district attorneys and others in the profession.

“These professionals graciously make time to come and speak to them,” Kennedy said. “The students get a little insight into the legal system, something I think is very valuable to young men and women who are interested in the law, and something I never had when I came through.”

Kennedy attended the Nashville School of Law, graduating in 1984.

“When I was in school, I never saw a lawyer,” he said. “So, I said to myself, when I’m able, I want to do something about that.” In the year 2000, Kennedy created and built Tennessee’s largest private courtroom, and named it the Court of Creativity. It’s located at the law firm’s 2050 Fort Campbell Blvd. office.

“Our law firm puts on mock trials at that location, and as of now, more than 26,000 students have come through and watched mock trials. Elementary students, and older students from Fort Campbell, CMCSS, local private schools, kids who were home-schooled, college kids, the whole gamut, have been welcomed to the Court of Creativity, and come through the program at no cost. They were bused in, and they got to see an actual trial from beginning to end.”

So, where and when did Kennedy, a man who grew up on a horse farm, develop this love of the law, and such a strong desire to give back?

Kevin with Treva Gordon, hosts of The Treva & Kevin Show.

“I was in the 4-H Club when I decided I wanted to pursue public speaking,” Kennedy said. “I became a champion public speaker as a child. When I arrived at APSU, I knew I was a good talker, so I pursued the law.

“My dad was a professional barber, so I didn’t have that family history in the business to fall back on, but I was top of my law class in the field of evidence. I loved my time there.”

Kennedy is well known in the community for his love of conversation. He never meets a stranger or shies away from the spotlight. He continues to co-host (for five years now) The Treva & Kevin Show with Treva Gordon. He also does a segment on News Channel 5 called Ask the Attorney, which has been running for nine years.

“I’ve been blessed to be able to use my legal talents and abilities,” Kennedy said. “I wanted to share, teach, and inspire, and really give back to the community. That has always been my goal. And I’m thankful that I’ve been able to accomplish that.”

“But I’m very excited that after two years of Covid-19 shut-downs we are finally able to host our internship again. I’m not sure of our lineup yet, but during our last internship, we had Jeffrey S. Bivins, an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, as our guest speaker.”

Kennedy and his team are already taking applications for this year’s internship program.

In addition to Kennedy's love for the law, he has a fondness for horses, and, he says, his teaching and sharing of knowledge probably comes from another passion, his love of the church.

"I've written books on horses," Kennedy said. "I also wrote a book called Divorce Through the Eyes of a Christian Lawyer which has been used in law schools across the nation. I also wrote about battling the 'me mentality,' which focuses on relationships.

"I have an innate desire to help. Once I learn something, I want to share it. If I can teach and help you, that is in my heart. That comes from my Christian upbringing, and teaching Sunday School. I got my strength from being raised in the church. My first public speaking was at the church. The techniques I've developed as a lawyer came from the Bible. I've always heard that you learn your craft well and give it away. It sounds counter-intuitive, but it makes a lot of sense."

That philosophy has worked well for Kennedy. His law firm currently employs about 35 people at three offices. He can still be found in the courtroom every day.

"That is where I operate," Kennedy said. "I get to see the public, and I love it. I focus on personal injury cases. We also deal with criminal and custody issues. I've changed over the years, the law in Montgomery County has as well.

"When I first got there, some of the people were using typewriters and carbon paper. There were no computers. Now Montgomery County Courts are very sophisticated.

"In the 1980's you could walk into the courtroom and see a lot of people you knew. You go in today and there is a host of people. The corridors are full, the courtyard is full, the courtrooms are full, and it's mostly new faces. There is a lot going on in Montgomery County, and as this city and county have grown, the court system has had to grow with it."

That growing need for legal professionals is one of the things that drives Kennedy. He feels that his internships open doors for future legal professionals.

"This internship absolutely opens doors for these students, now and for the rest of their lives," Kennedy said. "If you have students who have similar grades and whose records look comparable, an internship will give them an edge, every time.

"Both my sons went through the internship, and now they are both doctors. This program can help you no matter what field you're going in to. We have people that go into politics and other fields, and I'm proud of all the students who go through the program. I have a special bond with them."

Kennedy says the interns gain the skills of articulation and interaction. They also gain valuable insight from the Judges and other professionals.

"We provide an environment where these young people can hear a judges story, how they got to sit on the bench," Kennedy said.

His wife Rhonda joined the conversation. "It gives them hope," Rhonda said. "They can see their way to their dream. These kids can come from a background of living on a farm or bagging groceries and see that there is a path for them. When you take time to build a community, you make the community better. These students can create connections and build relationships. These relationships often lead to jobs."

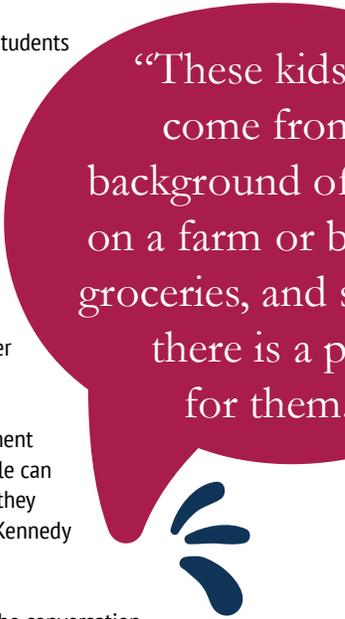

Kennedy says, when accepting applications, they are looking for the cream of the crop.

"We always want the best," he said. "We have met some of the most talented young people you have ever seen. Our job is to help hone their skills and take them to another level. The program lasts for a week. They take a tour of the jail and see things others can't. They get to hear from Circuit Judges, General Sessions and Juvenile Court Judges, and District Attorneys.

"They learn about what kind of cases are being heard. They get knowledge, and knowledge is power. So many people are robbed of opportunity because they never hear about the full scope of things. For example, there are so many rules that we are held to but were never taught. I'm trying to correct that."

This year's interns will experience different speakers each day. They'll go to court and watch a jury trial. They'll go to Kennedy's courtroom and participate in a mock trial. They'll vote, and learn about techniques like cross examination and direct examination, circumstantial evidence, how to pick a jury, opening and closing arguments, etc.

"These are all things they need to see and understand," Kennedy said. "The Judges have been excellent. Everyone in the profession seems really interested in helping the next generation. They are so generous with their time and will move things around to make their presence possible.

“And, we have some great success stories. Larry Wallace is now a Circuit Court Judge in Stewart and Dickson Counties. He was an early intern with me. Many of our interns have become District Attorneys, like Lydia Butts in Houston.

“We give them real world cutting-edge training, that helps them get to that next level. I would say about half our interns go or politics.”

For anyone interested in an internship
 this year, you just need to call Kennedy Law Firm. Let them know you're interested.
 They'll get you to fill out an application and

“The program is free, and once they go said. “And it's all at no cost. On the front of my building, it says 'we're committed to helping people'. It doesn't matter if you're broke, middle class, or rich. We help people, in this case, young people, and that's not just a slogan, that's a way of life for my brother Bruce and me.”

HOW TO CANCEL YOUR GYM MEMBERSHIP WITHOUT BREAKING A SWEAT

By Taylor Lieberstein

Let's say you wanted to work out more this year and joined a gym. Life happened, and now it's March. You don't feel like working out, and you want to cancel your gym membership.

It should be just as easy as it was to sign up, right? Unfortunately, this isn't the case with most gyms. The gym industry thrives on making it incredibly easy to join but painfully difficult to leave. Canceling your gym membership will likely be more exhausting than that hour-long kickboxing class you went to last month.

Each year millions of people sign expensive gym membership contracts during a promotional period. When signing up, gyms tell you that you're paying monthly and that you're not committed to anything. When you go to cancel their membership, most people find out that the terms of the contract were misrepresented or concealed.

Gyms actively try to recruit people who are not typical fitness enthusiasts because a gym's best customer is one who stays home. So, they make you jump through endless hoops to cancel the membership. Most only let you opt-out of them without paying if you are sick, injured, or move over 20 miles away. Even if you have one of the extenuating circumstances, you likely will not be able to cancel from the comfort of your own home. They want proof of why you're terminating early.

You are often required to physically go to the gym, where you fill out tedious paperwork, agree to incur a fee, and repeatedly explain why you've decided to abandon your fitness goals. Although the process is questionable and lengthy, it's a must-do. When a collection hits your credit report, it can drop your score as much as 75 points.

If your gym contract is not canceled correctly, it can damage your credit score, making it essential that you settle or pay the penalties before you forget. With many fitness chains facing bankruptcy and lawsuits right now, they aren't eager to make it easier on you, pandemic or not.

If you're looking to end (or alter) your gym membership once and for all here are some tips to help you cancel early without losing too much money.

STUDY THE FINE PRINT.

Somewhere, in your files or inbox, your existing contract sits. Search for any language that pertains to its cancellation policy and look for loopholes. The membership cancellation terms are detailed at the beginning of the membership period when the contract is signed.

Keep an eye out for the specific cancellation terms during the initial review of your contract and be sure to ask questions. If you want to dispute the charges or the terms of the contract, come prepared to strengthen your argument with relevant bank statements and documentation. Many gyms are part of a large network of gym franchises and your best approach will be to bring your dispute directly to the local owner or franchisee listed on your contract.

EXERCISE YOUR RIGHTS.

You cannot be bound by terms and conditions in a contract if a key term is considered unfair. The Consumer Rights Act 2015 has a fairness test. Early termination fees, unnecessarily long contracts, automatic renewals, or excessive penalties are considered unfair. Any significant change to the goods and services that you have bought and paid for can be considered an unfair contract term. If terms and conditions tilt the balance unfairly, it is considered unenforceable rendering the contract null and void.

TIME IT OUT.

Make sure you cancel your gym membership right before the next billing cycle starts. This way, you won't be charged for an extra month at the gym you don't plan to use. While you may still have to pay a cancellation fee, ending before the next billing cycle could save you from having to pay for the extra month on top of it. Check your billing date by looking at your credit or debit card statement to see when you typically get charged, or log into your member account on your gym's website or app to see your account details.

REACH OUT TO THE GYM'S CORPORATE HEADQUARTERS.

When you Google the name of the gym and "corporate headquarters," the search engine will usually bring up the Better Business Bureau information page about the company. It lists the address and usually the phone number for the company's main office. Send a certified letter there spelling out how you've tried to cancel your membership and that you want to do that.

Be mindful that if your gym is a franchise, the policy may be different than that of corporate-owned locations. Each gym franchise has a cancellation procedure that is a little bit different.

FREEZE THE CONTRACT.

At the end of the day a contract for a gym membership is legally binding. If your gym is resisting your request to opt out early, it may not be the best option. If you're trying to ditch the membership because you'll be traveling for a few months you can also opt to freeze your account instead of canceling it entirely. Most gyms let you stop paying your monthly membership for a certain amount of time, so long as you give them a heads up and plan to renew once the freezing period ends.

Canceling your gym membership is absurdly difficult. But you can do it, flex on that gym. You'll thank yourself in the end when you're saving money monthly. 🦋
